Chairman's direction: six points

Top level, not a task list. These are Cuan's suggestions for your review, not legal advice: Pat and Barry Scannell should confirm the legal points.

1 Get your authority in writing.
You are chairman on a handshake until the board records it. Ask for a board resolution naming you interim chairman, its scope and length, and what you do not do (no executive or commercial decisions). Your paid role, equity and terms are yours to declare and a third party should review them: do not settle them in the room.

2 Insist on one verified picture of the group.
One roster: every company, name, CRO number, directors, secretary, shareholders and registered office, checked against the CRO. Until that exists, every statement about the group is Shane's, not a fact.

3 Sign nothing until the set is clean.
Final names (Shane's replacements), no blank dates, one set of figures, the tax route tested by a qualified adviser, and Documents 1 to 10 consistent. A first signing meeting is for incorporation and the bank account only: keep it to that.

4 Run the board properly from day one.
A decision record (what, who, date), minutes, a conflicts register, reserved matters, and a rule that no commercial or technical commitment is made without the board. As chairman, keep Shane's alignment on anything outward-facing, and keep your own voice to chair and challenge.

5 Protect your independence and the group from conflicts.
Declare your other interests in writing: Meridian (outside the group), Velocity and Barber Republic, UHL and AHL. Agree the side-projects protocol with Shane. Where the group's decisions touch Diarmuid, Pat or you, step back and let others decide.

6 Control what investors see.
The Asterial raise (via Diarmuid and Vashid) should not go further until the structure is signed and the plan carries one set of numbers. Decide the option-pool dilution (carved from Noesis's 85% or shared) before an investor sees the plan, and keep a data room.

If you only do three things this week: (1) Tue 10 Nov: sign incorporation and bank papers only, with final names. (2) Ask for the one verified roster. (3) Ask Shane to decide the pool dilution. Target for the rest: Mon 23 Nov.
